Instructor's Bio:

Originally from Marion, Indiana Xavier Medina studied dance (including Jazz, Tap, Ballet, Modern and Hip Hop) at the Community School of the Arts in downtown Marion. After graduating from high school, he continued his studies through the Contemporary Dance program at Indiana University. There he had founded the IU Ballroom Dance Company that performs at various venues around the University, from Greek philanthropies to variety shows. He is happy to continue sharing his dance experience through his 2nd year teaching at Riolo Dance Studio.

Some of Xavier's accomplishments include:

2008-09: Choreographer and Director of Flores de Samba Dance Company, a Brazilian style dance company;

2009-11: Music editor, Lighting master, and company member of Hip Hop Connexion, a Hip Hop dance company based out of Chicago, Illinois.

2010-12: Director and founder of the IU Ballroom Dance Company, also known as the IU Formation Dance Team, within the student group IU Ballroom Dance Club.

2014-15: Performed for the Hamilton County "Dancing Like the Stars" for the "Meals on Wheels" charity venue presented by St. Vincent Hospital.

2015-16: Performed at 2 Anderson, IN, Paramount Theater productions of "Dancing Like the Stars" Fundraiser.

Fun Facts about Samba

Adapted from:

<http://www.atomicballroom.com/>

When people think of samba, some envision TV shows like Dancing With the Stars with a pair of minimally dressed ballroom dancers slinking across the floor to fast, pulsating rhythms. Others may picture scantily clad women adorned with feathers.

Samba's Roots

Synonymous with all things Brazil, Brazilian samba actually has its roots firmly planted throughout West African history and culture.

Samba music originated from batuque, a style of music and dance from Cape Verde. Over time and after contact with various music styles like polka, maxixe, lunda, semba and others, it began to reflect the blend of other genres, incorporating trumpets & string instruments. Early styles of samba are traced back to 17th Century in Bahia Salvador, Brazil where the slaves danced as part of candomblé (prayer ceremonies). Although Samba originated from West African slaves, it didn't gain its national identity as a Brazilian institution until the late 1800s and early 1900s when it was brought to Rio de Janeiro by slaves from Bahia. In Rio, the samba was initially looked down upon by the European upper class and thought of as a street dance of the poor. Ironically the perception of it as sinful, taboo and of lower class is what eventually led to its wide spread popularity.

In 1928 the elite began to legitimize samba by creating official samba schools of up to 5,000 musicians and dancers. They put together elaborate shows to display for millions of spectators each year just before Lent which gave life to the modern day Carnival parade.

Ballroom Samba

Although ballroom samba is referred to as 'samba' in the international ballroom dance world, it is not recognized in Brazil as such. And although some elements of Brazilian samba are included in ballroom style, the posture, tempo and overall feel is very different and often unrecognizable to the admirers of traditional samba.

Etiquette

Unlike ballroom, there is no written rule book for conduct on the samba dance floor. Most Passistas (samba dancers) find such restrictions counter-intuitive, as the essence of samba is about freedom of movement, with minimal structure and regulations. Since it arose from the suffering of enslaved people who danced it both because of and in spite of their oppression, the traditional solo form of the dance as it is seen in the world renowned Carnival Parade each year, is all about an amalgamation of art, emotion, tradition, the expression of joy in spite of hardship, celebration despite sadness, musicality through interpretation of rhythm and soul, sensuality, unity, culture – all the things that can't be captured by a series of steps and rules.

Survey Results:

Summarized by Amy Clark

Several months ago, Heartland provided a Quality/Interest Survey for attendees to complete. The Board's intent—by gathering ratings and comments—is to determine perceived strengths and weaknesses of Heartland Chapter and maintain and improve as necessary.

While the number of surveys completed and returned was a modest 18 (or 40% of those who attended the party), the ratings were extremely consistent, suggesting that the information was a fairly accurate reflection of general opinion.

Twenty survey items were listed, with the following rating options available: (1) poor, (2) fair, (3) good, (4) very good, (5) excellent.

Approximately 90% of the rankings fell in the “very good/excellent” category; of the remaining 10%, most were “good.”

- The following items were listed on the survey...

...facility...music...hospitality...instructors/lessons...admission price...refreshments...

theme/special dances...communications...annual workshop...community exhibitions...

kids’ ballroom program...interaction with other dance groups...overall Board performance...

overall satisfaction.

- The comments received included a few recurring themes; a sampling of those includes the following...

...the facility is highly rated, but better parking lot lighting is needed (Riolo already addressed this!)

...the music also is highly rated, with the caveat that the beat must always be prominent

...the food is fine but not necessary

...theme dances should be retained / expanded

...communications are strong, per some responses—or need some improvement, per others; suggestions included featuring “spotlight” articles in the newsletter.

- Other info gleaned from the surveys showed the following...

...almost all respondents were members

...most had danced / taken dance lessons for at least 10 years

...most danced at least once a month, many danced multiple times a week

...A little more than half of the responses were female

...fewer than half indicated a regular dance partner

...most were at least 50 years old.

With the information collected, the Board will strive to “accentuate the positive” and “eliminate the negative” wherever possible in an effort to provide a good experience for participants in all Heartland activities. And as always, the Board members continue to welcome suggestions for enhancing club events of any kind.
